Subscription Revenue

Date	% Change	Reason	Description
Jul 25, 2024	(23.54)% in ONE DAY	Earnings	(Reuters) - Universal Music Group (UMG.AS), opens new tab shed around $15 billion off its value on Thursday after the world's biggest music label reported lower-than-expected streaming and subscription revenue for the second quarter.

What really happened?

- EPS growth outpaced Net Profit per Share growth. Likely caused by share buybacks, one-time income, or accounting adjustments rather than genuine profit expansion.
- Increased debt by 1B

Artist costs increased by €199 million from €2,385 million in the first half 2023 to €2,584 million in the first half 2024 driven by the increase in sales. As a percentage of revenues, artists costs increased to 46.8% in the first half 2024 from 46.3%

Product costs increased by €103 million to €529 million in the first 6 months of 2024 from €426 million in the first 6 months of 2023 reflecting the growth in revenues. Product costs as a percentage of revenues increased to 9.6% from 8.3% driven primarily by the higher proportion of merchandising sales.

Selling, general and administrative expenses decreased by €99 million to €1,512 million in the first half 2024 from €1,611 million in the first half 2023 and decreased as a percentage of revenues to 27.4% in first half 2024 from 31.3% in first half 2023.

- €171 million in share-based compensation, ↓50% H1 2023
- €113 million restructuring charges compared to €15 million restructuring charges in 2023

Operating profit was €756 million in the first half of 2024, compared to €591 million for the first half of 2023, an increase of €165 million (27.9%) or an increase of 32.4% at constant currency

Financial results +€250M by their stake in Spotify and Tencent Music. This is not recurring; it's market-driven (temporary). Spotify REALLY drove this growth.

EPS jumping from €0.34 → €0.50 reflects both real improvement and temporary accounting gains, not purely sustainable operational growth.
